CARTE POSTALE. POSTKARTE.

The Gevangenpoort is an ancient tower with a gateway, leading from the Buitenhof to the Plaats. It was formerly used as a place of confinement for political prisoners, among the most prominent being one Cornelis de Witt, falsely accused of a political conspiracy in 1672; his brother John, hearing of his danger, went to visit him, and the misled and infuriated populace attacked and killed them both. The old prison now contains a museum of instruments of torture.
